Competition for admission to law school is intense, with many if not most students hoping to gain admission to a “dream” law school. Many of these students then hope to transfer to that dream school. The intensity of the law school experience—along with the exclusivity of top law jobs—feeds a desire among many law students to “transfer up” to their dream school.

This book is a guide for these law students. It points out the difficulties and potential traps, and walks students through the transfer process. Importantly, this is the only book available in this topic.

National Media:

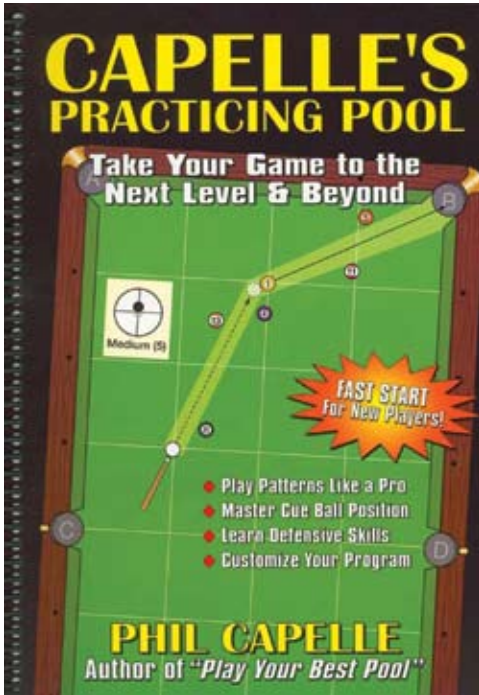

Promotional efforts focus on: (1) annual direct marketing to 110,000+ law school students each fall; (2) ads in the Pre-Law Insider, The Restatement, and National Jurist magazines for pre-law and law students; (3) guest articles by authors of the books above in these two publications; and (4) internet promotion.

Author Bio:

Andrew Carrabis, MBA and former high school teacher, entered Florida A&M University College of Law where he finished 3 out of 137 students. He transferred to the University of Florida Levin College of Law.

Seth Haimovitch entered Florida A&M University School of Law where he finished 2 out of 137 students. He subsequently transferred to the University of Florida Levin College of Law.
